

difference between how these patients are managed across its hospital sites. This is also confirmed that there is no significant association with safeguarding. The Trust also confirms that there is no significant case-by-case basis depending on injury, level of consciousness, and issues decision to admit intoxicated young people into hospital over night is made on a matter you raised. Worcestershire Acute Hospitals NHS Trust confirms that the Departmental officials have made enquiries with the local NHS in relation to the hours.

However, no other national guidance or policy has been issued on this subject.

The National Poisons Information Service advises that all children with features >0.4 ml/kg body weight of absolute alcohol should be observed for at least 4 hours of alcohol intoxication should be referred to hospital. Those who have ingested

The Medical Council on Alcohol is a charity concerned with the effects of alcohol on health. In its publication Alcohol and Health (2010), it states:

Thank you for your letter of 14 April about alcohol related hospital admissions.

Bill Hartnett
Chair, Redditch Borough Council
Chair, Redditch Crime and Disorder Scrutiny Panel
Councillor Bill Hartnett
Town Hall
Walter Strand Square
Redditch
Worcestershire B98 8AH
23 MAY 2011

Tel: 020 7210 4850

Richmond House
79 Whitehall
London
SW1A 2NS

Parliamentary Under Secretary of State for Public Health
From Anne Milton MP

PO0000610902

ANNE MILTON

Anne Milton
MP

Please do contact me again if there are any further concerns.

Departmental officials also made enquiries with other NHS trusts across the UK to determine how widespread the practice of overnight admission is. Typically, trusts have a local policy to assess the need for admission based on safeguarding young people as well as on clinical thresholds. Approximately 50-60 per cent of emergency department attendances as a result of alcohol misuse in under-16s are admitted. It is the responsibility of the treating clinician to decide whether to admit the young person in question into hospital.